The German Offensive

lin shortly after the commencement of the Verdun drive, in the nature of a military survey, from official sources close to the general staff, throws light marized as follows: The attacks of the Italians

The "far significance" of the spring operations, according to this German statement, is the fact that while the Entente Allies had planned a general onset, the German armies anticipated them and threw the Entente plans "topsy turvy."

"Our enemies had been preparing for this general onset with all the resources at their disposal," says the German summary, "and they have never ceased telling us their resources were inexhaustible. Feeling certain of victory in advance, they had heralded their initiative before their ow, peo ples and everybody else. The German armies however, anticipated them and threw their wellmatured plan topsy-turvy.

"Their operations as seen from the German side, consisted partly of offensive and partly of defensive battles, yet they are all characterized by the Booze Again one uniform feature-namely, that a German one uniform feature—namely, that a German BY the strongest kind of circumstantial evisoring offensive has come instead of the offensive dence, says the Maui News, booze stands planned by the nemy.

"The attacks of the Russians and the Italians at the same time are only in a tactical sense offensive They are really defensive operations on the largest scale. That firds expression in the very term 'relieving offensive,' which has the merit of being ornamental and pretty, but also clearly intelligible. A "relieving offensive' is an offensive act with a defensive purpose.

"What this means in its effects upon the morale The words 'We are advancing' exercise a magical charm upon the German troops; they throw a spell feels proud and happy to do his share, even though his own section be assigned to mere defensive duty. The Germans fighting on the East front, conscious of the fact that we are dictating the spired by the offensive spirit in heroically resisting the onsets of the Russians en masse as their comrades. Precisely the troops fighting in Russia, who enjoyed the good fortune last summer of pressing forward incessantly and wresting enormous stretches of territory from the Russian colossus, are now looking on without envy at the attacks of their comrades in the west, after these had for so long been condemned to the self-sacrificing task of trench warfare."

The survey takes up in detail the various operations on the Western front, but covers the operations only up to April 1 and gives but little further information than has been contained in the official communiques and other despatches.

Referring in a general way to the battles of the Meuse, it declares that the most important result was that French troops were relieved by the English from Armentieres to Arras, and in the last third of March still further southward to the Somme. "But," the report adds, "the substituted troops have not developed any considerable activity. Neither have the English made the slightest attempt to relieve the strain upon their hardpressed ally by making an attack upon their own account."

The other two allies of the French-the Russians and Italians-made more earnest efforts to support their ally, says the survey, and it sums up what these operations were as follows:

"Before the German east front there were observed since March 10 troops in motion which announced the beginning of heavy attacks at several points. Heavy artillery fire began March 13 upon a large section of our defenses and reached in places the proportion of drum-fire. It could be seen that the enemy had by night cut passages through his wire entanglements, and that during the artillery firing reserves were being placed in position ready to advance to the front. On March 18 the attacks began. The enemy had selected seven points at which to try to make a breach in our lines. His offensive began in the section south of Dvinsk. The region between the Narotch and Wisznieff lakes, then further to the north the region around Postavy, and finally a strip to the north of Vidsy were attacked daily by the Russians with great vim from March 18 to 22. At only one point, the outpost at Stachovcze to the south of the Narotch lake, was it found necessary to make an unimportant retirement on our front, but the new position was then held without way ering. At all other points one Russian attack after the other broke down with frightful losses on their side. The like bloody losses and failure to score results attended the enemy's advanced near Dvinsk and at several other points between Dvinsk and Riga.

March 18 to 22 the enemy brought up fresh troops, marine. Great is the New Freedom! When the and after another long artillery preparation a new next time comes to make an effort for the susseries of attacks began on the twenty-fourth and pension of the Coastwise Law will it be termed twenty-fifth at all the points that had been pre- unpatriotic to desire to travel to the Coast on viously threatened. At Salonika 300,000 Entente troops are held fast, without hitherto having been able to advance against their besiegers. Aviona is closely invested. On the Caucasus front, finally, the Russian advance, at first successful, was checked. In view of all these facts the military situation at the end of March can be characterized as highly gratifying. dictate the strategy of the hour. If confirmation comes of the news cabled from Tokio to the Hawaii Shinpo, that President Yuan of China is stricken with apoplexy, the political situation in China will soon be less complicated. The personality of Yuan Shih-kai dominates China and his personal influence has had more to do with more people during the past few years than that of any other man, not excepting Kaiser Wilhelm.

Last year Honolulu spent $272,000 on roadwork, according to figures quoted by a city official. The mayor now wants to float a bond issue for $750,000 for further roadwork. Does this mean that we will get three times as much for the loan fund as we got from the tax money spent? And if so, where is the roadwork we got for our $272,000? If it could be located and measured we would be in a better position to consider the oond issue question.

The Advertiser has received a communication harging Supervisor Logan with nearly all the rimes of the decalogue and all because he has suggested leasing the public baths at Kapiolani Park. Our correspondent makes the mistake of supposing that Mr. Logan advocates leasing the baths for private use. His idea, on the contrary, is to return to the old system, under which the baths were run for the benefit of the public for the first few years of their ownership by the city. There is no scheme on to close the place.

Business In Hands of Japanese News of Purchase of Two Add Who Find It Most Profitable One

The fisheries of Hawali is now practically in the hands of the Japanese who are proving their ability to outdo the people of any other nationality here

This fact was pointed out yesterday by an official of one of the three large Japanese fishing companies, which have a practical monopoly of the industry in the Islands. The boldness of the Japanese fisher

The boldness of the Japanese isner-men, and their willingness to go far afield for their catches, and wait at sea antil the catch is sufficiently large to make them a profit are perhaps the chief factors in their marked superiori-ty over some of their competitors in the trade.

There are about 100 fishing boats of sampans, engaged in the traffic and manned by Japanese fishermen, and most of them are fitted with gasoline engines, and all of them belong to one or the other of the three main companies, The Honololu Fishery Company, the Hawnian Fishing Company, and the Pacific Fishing Company. Most of the shareholders in these companies are Japanese though there are a few Chinese and haoles. About 400 fishermen are engaged in the business, most of them living in Kakaako.

The profits of the business are large. One of the companies in a recent semi-annual report of the business done showed that receipts have seldom fallen below $500 a day, and have risen considerably above that during certain seasons of the year. Some catches made by the larger boats average between $700 and $800, while others drop as low as $350.

In it the Due said that he was cruising around the world and was in Oriental waters at the time the war began. The Duc, who is a cousin of the King of Spain and son of Louis Philippe D'Orleans, pretender to the throne of France, immediately turned the yacht over to the British, who fitted her with uns and used her for some time in Pacific waters as an auxiliary cruiser In that capacity she is said to have made several important captures of merchant vessels. After turning over his yacht, the Duc, accompanied by Captain Morton, crossed the Pacific to the United States, stopping in Honolulu en

The yacht carried a complement fast steam launches. This fact, coupled with the speed of the vessel itself, caused the British naval authorities to remove the yacht and her launches to the North Sea for scouting and dispatch duty.
